the 5s. Meteorologist stephen bowers is here now with first alert 5. Temperatures started trending downward yesterday. That trend will continue today, but we will still be warmer than where climatology says we should be for this time of year. On average today's date sees high temperatures of 73 degrees in colorado springs and 80 degrees in pueblo. Right now we are in the 50's with 40's in high elevations. We will warm once again into the 80's in most areas with lower 90's likely along the arkansas river valley from pueblo east through la junta and lamar. High pressure is centered over far eastern colorado and western kansas. Wind flows in a counter-clockwise direction around high pressure. Since we are to the west of the circulation's center the wind here will be mainly from the south/southeast today. That's a warming wind coming from an area with high humidity, so temperatures go up today and the air could become increasingly muggy. A cold front is approaching from our northwest and will move through later in the to. A new poll shows colorado voters may be changing their minds about the legalization of marijuana in our state. The denver business journal published the poll by suffolk university and usa today. People were asked how they feel now about the legalization of pot in our state. 50 percent said they now disagree with the decision, 46 percent say they are o-k with it. Nearly half also disapprove of the way the state is managing legal pot sales. You may remember back in 20-12 when marijuana legalization was on the ballot it passed by a 10-point margin. There's one guy in colorado who may be "o-k" with the legalization of recreational marijuana in our state...and that's denver broncos quarterback, peyton manning. Manning owns over 20 papa john's pizza franchises across colorado and he says since pot has become legal, business has been good to him. Manning made those remarks in a recent interview.
